Biographical / Historical

The National Ballet was founded as the resident ballet company of Washington, D.C. in 1962 by Jean Riddell. Frederick Franklin was the artistic director and was joined by Ben Stevenson in 1971. The Ballet gave its first performance on January 3, 1963 at Lisner Auditorium. During its 12 years, the company also performed at the Kennedy Center and in 275 cities throughout North America. In 1974 the Company disbanded due to financial problems.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Scope and Contents

The records consist of trustee minutes, programs, advertisements, press releases, clippings, biographical files, promotional materials, and scrapbooks regarding the promotion and administration of the National Ballet. The collection also contains musical scores, hanging plots, stage directions, board studies, set designs, videotapes, audiotapes, microforms, and photographs which document its artistic work.
