Historical Note

WJZ-TV Channel 13 is owned by the CBS Broadcasting, Inc. and is located in Baltimore, Maryland. The station was originally called WAAM and was Baltimore's third television station. When WAAM began broadcasting in November 1948 under the ownership of Ben and Herman Cohen, it was an ABC affiliate. In 1957, the Westinghouse Electric Corporation purchased the station and renamed it WJZ-TV.

In 1959, WJZ-TV built the first three-antenna candelabra tower, sharing it with the other local Baltimore stations, WMAR-TV and WBAL-TV. In 1977, WJZ-TV News began its Electronic News Gathering (ENG) Library, recording newscasts and retaining raw footage on a daily basis.

WJZ-TV often preempted ABC programming in favor of locally produced shows and syndicated content from Westinghouse's broadcasting division, Group W. The affiliation switch to CBS occurred in 1995, ending WJZ-TV's decades long link with ABC. Westinghouse bought CBS in 1996, making WJZ-TV a CBS owned and operated station.

Local sports discussion program

^ Return to Table of ContentsEvening Magazine, 1977-1991Physical Description: 8 Reels 2 inch videotape: QuadSeries Description

During the summer of 1976, KPIX in San Francisco, a CBS affiliate owned by Westinghouse Broadcasting (Group W), premiered a local weeknight television news and entertainment series titled Evening: The MTWTF Show, eventually christened Evening Magazine. The show was designed to add a local focus to news. This show was created due to the FCC's newly enacted "Prime Time Access Rule" to give back the half-hour preceding primetime to local stations. The rule prohibited these stations from accepting network programming for that particular timeslot. This show was one of the first television news shows to begin the trend of shooting on videotape rather than 16mm film. The production called for the local hosts to have on-location wraparounds (in and around their local communities) and to tell short stories about ordinary and everyday people. As the show gained popularity, the other Group W owned stations around the country created their own Evening Magazine shows, including WJZ-TV in Baltimore. Evening Magazine was a locally produced prime-time access series that aired on the Group W stations in Baltimore, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and San Francisco. On other stations around the country the show was designated "PM Magazine".

Eyewitness News, 1977-11-15-2000-08-03

Series Description

The first Eyewitness News format began in 1959 at a local television station in Cleveland (now WKYC-TV), which was a Group W owned station. It was the US's first 90 min local newscast. It was first christened Eyewitness News in 1965, defining the role of the reporter as a "witness" to news events to anchors and viewers. Following its success, the other Group W stations adopted the format and name, including WJZ-TV. The series is missing the several years' worth of broadcasts.
