Biographical / Historical

The YWCA of Washington, D.C. was organized on May 5, 1905 and incorporated later that year, on June 30. Bettie G. Francis served as the first President. By the end of its first year, the organization had 193 members. The original mission of the YWCA was "to provide employment, housing, and moral development for young women." Over the years, however, the organization's reach expanded to include programs for men, women, and children in all areas of health, fitness, education, career training, youth programs and the arts.
