Biographical / Historical

The Shaed Family was a prominent family of educators and professionals in Washington, D.C. After their marriage in 1900, Gregory and Cenos Shaed moved from Florida to Washington, D.C. where Mr. Shaed became a printer with the Government Printing Office. The Shaeds had six children, Alice Evelyn, Ernestine Pamela, Helen Virginia, Dorothy Lee-Louise, Eunice Jane, and Gregory W., Jr. All of the Shaed daughters were graduates of Miner Normal School and became teachers for D.C. Public Schools. Gregory, became a physician after graduating from Howard Medical School in 1934 and practiced in Florida, Michigan, and Virginia. In 1971, Alice and Ernestine Shaed Elementary School located at 301 Douglas Street, NE was dedicated to honor the Shaed sisters' careers at D.C. Public Schools. The school was closed in 2011. The Baltimore family was a prominent family of educators in Washington, D.C. Thelma Lane Baltimore, educated at Miner Normal School and Howard University, taught in D.C. schools ending her career as Director of Elementary Education in D.C. Charles Baltimore was a coach and vocational educator who taught at the Armstrong Training School and was a principal at Bell Vocational High School in the 1960s.

Revision Description

Finding aid updated by Fay Haskins. Finding aid updated to be more evergreen. 1998 2019-10-21

Custodial History

In the mid 1980s, Nora D. Gregory, a member of the Library's Board of Directors, proposed the development of a genealogical collection to document the history of certain prominent African-American families in Washington, D.C. history. Eunice Shaed donated the Shaed family papers to the Library in 1988. There is no documentation surrounding the donations of the Baltimore or Hoffman materials.

Processing Information

Originally processed in 1990, the collection received additional processing attention in 1996.
